warming up

WORKSHOP:
Research problem formulation and research objectives

This assignment builds on previous stages. It must therefore incorporate the corrections, adjustments, and recommendations provided earlier, keeping the overall project up to date. These improvements will be reviewed and form part of the assessment.

Before starting this stage, the business diagnosis must be completed and corrected, since methodological decisions must follow from and be consistent with them.

Workshop aims to apply an initial methodological approach to a problem associated with a business, project, organization, or institution, recognizing that any search for information relevant to decision-making must begin with a clear definition of what needs to be known. Based on an analysis of the selected business, project, organization, or institution and the identified problem or opportunity, the team must translate this information need into an overall research objective and break it down into specific objectives that address the problem in a concrete and systematic manner.

Deliverable

The assignment must be developed in a brief, executive, and visual format, including:

- Cover slide for .
- 1–2 context slides, that could a brief presentation of the selected business, project, organization, or institution and the identified problem or opportunity:
  - Identification of the information need, explaining what must be known or understood to address the identified issue, that will provide context for the market research objectives you've established.
- 1 slide presenting the objectives:
  - One overall research objective.
  - Specific objectives derived from that overall objective.
- Submission format: PDF.
- Deadline: before the start of class.
- Presentation order: based on the order in which assignments are received.

At this stage, students are not expected to conduct the research or propose data collection instruments. The focus is on demonstrating the ability to move from a broad problem to a clear, coherent, and manageable set of objectives.

Presentation and assessment

Each group will have a maximum of 15 minutes to present its work.
Feedback will be provided immediately after each presentation, identifying strengths, points requiring clarification, and opportunities for improvement.
Once all presentations and feedback sessions are completed, Workshop grades will be provided to all groups.